

work party. to come together and revamp the components of a postvention plan. Just like what we looked at today.

Radical Dreaming Space

On the subsequent pages, use the sticky notes to add your dreams/ideas that come to mind for reimagining future programming and supports that could elevate the field, imagining barriers could be removed.

Thinking about future training...what would you want to see, lead or experience?

I'd love more discussion on creating student support spaces after a tragedy---what they look like, activity ideas, how it can be run with limited resources

More conversation around framing the word "suicide". Also curious about how death of despair is used.

Training and education on grief for admin, staff, students, and communities

Thinking about resources, tools, etc. - What would you like to see exist?

What are you
daydreaming
about?

Maybe this already exists----but more
tools for school
leaders on how to support their staff
after a tragedy.

I love the ideas on this page!

Student
centered
activity ideas
to use after a tragedy

A liberated lens
postvention policy
tool that folks could use to evaluate and
evolve their policies

What are you curious about in this field? What would you research or learn more about if you could?

What else feels important to capture or dream around?

school communities
where relationships
are developed and
nurtured on an ongoing basis so
that postvention
can be safe and supportive for all
